SETTING STANDARDS IS EVERYONE'S BUSINESS.

Establishing effective technical standards. It makes good business sense, no matter what business you're in. Because clear, cohesive practices and procedures help things run smoothly.

Which is why we need your help.

Who are we? We're NISO. The National Information Standards Organization. We develop technical standards for the entire range of information services and products: online information services, librarianship, bookselling, indexing, and library equipment and supplies. In fact, our standards are an integral part of many work environments.

How can you help us? By helping NISO set the standards in your profession. Because only with the input of successful organizations like yours can we develop proper standards. We also need your help with funding. You see, we depend on the support of our members. Members from all types of organizations including libraries, publishers, large and small companies, and government agencies. There are a range of membership options available; one is right for your organization.

What's in it for you? A chance to influence your profession's direction and growth by setting its standards. A chance to work closely with your peers. A chance to plan for the new standards that will directly affect you.

What should you do now? Call, write, or fax us. We'll tell you more about ourselves, how we can work for you, and how you can help us.

NISO has developed over fifty information standards. Here are just a few of the standards that benefit you.

- Standard identifiers for books and serials
- Standard format and vocabulary for information sharing
- Standard computer-to-computer protocol linking local, regional, national, and international bibliographic systems
- Standards for permanent and durable book papers and bindings
